Event Summary

This inaugural event of the Ann M. Jones Institute for Innovation in Nursing Education will focus on the changing roles of nurses within all practice settings in Minnesota. Participants will actively engage in exploring innovative means to educate, and prepare for practice, the nurse of the near future. Creative partnerships, or "building the bridge" between education and practice, is essential to achieve this outcome. The Minnesota Center for Nursing, the Minnesota Alliance for Nursing Education and the Minnesota Action Coalition will provide the framework for follow-up and sustainability of the outcomes of the day.

ATTEND THIS INSTITUTE AND AT THE END OF THE DAY:

- Establish the Ann M. Jones Institute for Innovation in Nursing Education as a state-wide resource.
- Integrate the national perspective on current trends in health care delivery, nursing educational innovations and needed transformational efforts personal and in delivery systems into plans to improve Minnesota state health.
- Build solution driven partnerships across education and practice that clarify changing roles and needed innovation in the delivery of nursing care across Minnesota.
- Develop action plans that identify and prioritize innovative solutions and can be implemented in collaborative ways across MN over the next 12 months.
